Chapter 1 by Katherine

October 15

Yeah. I got another D on my math test. This time I actually studied for it. Who cares anyways. There will be another time where I can ace my test. There is only one reason why I like my Friday math class. It's the last class of the day and I get to go home right after. Soon enough, class was over and I was racing Peyton the the car. "Hi Peyton! Hi Skylar! Mommy is going to take us to get ice cream with Paige! I'm going to get chocolate and Paige is going to get cookie dough." Mia talked way too much. Just as Mia said, we went and got ice cream and Mia and Paige sang songs the whole 15 minute drive there. We went to the ice cream parlor so much that the people working there knew our names and our orders and I don't know if that is a good thing or a bad thing. That night was just normal. As of most sleepovers, Peyton and I stayed up pretty late drinking soda, watching movies, eating popcorn, and talking about all the gossip going around our school. We laughed so hard we almost cried. Eventually, the whole house was up yelling at us because we were making too much noise. I got grounded for months.
